Firms warn of oil shortage

Gov't asks suppliers to make sacrifice

By Amy R. Ibeas, Norman Bordadora and Christian K. Eguerra

OIL COMPANIES SAID they would follow a Malacating order to bring down fuel prices to their levels 12 days ago, but warned of a possible supply shortage.

"We will comply. We have no choice, but [the executive order] has serious implications not only to the supply of products in the country, but also to businesses," Edgar Chua, country chair of Shell companies in the Philippines, said at yesterday's meeting with officials of the Department of Energy (DOE).

For Mariano, president of Eastern Petroleum, said the industry's fuel supply would be threatened because of the order.

"Already, flying V Philippines and Total Philippines said they are canceling their importation [of petroleum products]. That's dangerous, when people stop selling," he said.

The oil companies said they would also suffer revenue losses as a result of Executive Order No. 899, which directs

DACER-CORBITO MURDERS

Lacson belies Mancao claim of kill orders

By Norman Bordadora

FORMERLY DISMISSED INVOLVEMENT in the 2000 murders of publicist Salvador "Biboy" Dacer and his driver, Sen. Benigno Lacson said he was in the United States with President Joseph Estrada at the time when he supposedly ordered Dacer's killing.

For the first time since the Department of Justice (DOJ) reopened its probe of the twin killings of Dacer and his driver Emmanuel Corbito, Lacson yesterday presented himself before a panel of DOJ prosecutors in a bid to rebut the testimony of his accuser, former Senior Supt. Cesar Mancao II.

Lacson went to the DOJ to affirm the authenticity of his affidavit rejecting Mancao's allegations.

In his counteraffidavit, Lacson also said he was with the then Trade Secretary, now Sen. Manuel Roxas II, as part of the Bretaña delegation to a United Nations summit held in September 2000.

The panel did not pose any questions to Lacson during the hearing. Mancao was not present.

In his affidavit dated Feb. 15, 2009, Mancao said he was in a car with Lacson and with then Philippine National Police Inspectors General Michael Ray Aquino when he overheard Lacson supposedly order Aquino to catch and severely kill Dacer and former PNP intelligence chief Reynaldo Benito, a Lacson associate.

The Dacer-Corbito murders occurred while Lacson was head of the Presidential Anti-Organized Crime Task Force (PACTO). Mancao and Aquino were among his officers then.

Aquino is currently held in a jail in the United States after being convicted of possession of confidential US documents.

Teodoro, Villar keep mum on VP choice

IF DEPUTY SECRETARY Gilbert Teodoro Jr. and Sen. Blas Villanueva have set their eyes on their No. 2 in next year's presidential election, they're keeping it close to their chest.

Villar, standard-bearer of the Nacionalista Party (NP), refused to reveal the progress of his camp's courtship of Sen. Lito Lapid, who has declared she is running for vice president, but with whom is anybody's guess.

"Let's not mention names. Many things can happen since the election is still seven months away," Villar said.

But his choice of his chief's color betrayed him. He showed up at the Senate press office wearing a white shirt under his trademark orange jacket. Until yesterday he had worn orange shirts in all his public appearances.

He was asked why he was wearing white—Lapid's campaign color. The well-made 40-year-old beamed and quipped: "I didn't have anything to wear."

'No need for swine flu emergency'

By Dana Pascudigan

DISPENSING THE EXPECTED scope of swine flu cases in the northern hemisphere with the onset of winter, the Department of Health (DOH) seems to need to relax measures to prevent the spread of influenza A(H1N1) and declare a health emergency at this time because the novel virus is already in the Philippines with generally mild symptoms.

The DOH has confirmed 3,212 cases as of Oct. 17, of which 30 people, nearly those with underlying medical conditions, have died, resulting in a case fatality ratio (CFR) of 0.6 percent. The DOH began tracking swine flu cases in May.

Globally, 414,945 people were infected with the flu virus of whom 4,959 died as of Oct. 18, for a CFR of 1.2 percent, according to the World Health Organization (WHO).

"We are not going back to containment measures because we already have cases in the Philippines. As of the moment, there is no need to do that," Health Secretary Francisco Duque III told reporters at the DOH headquarters.

GMA returns, heads straight for Pampanga

YERAC, PAMPANGA—PRESIDENT Maragapi-Arroyo was back in her home province of Pampanga yesterday, barely 12 hours after returning from Thailand where she attended the 15th Association of Southeast Asian Nations (Asean) summit.

Ms Arroyo had just flown to Pampanga two days before yesterday's visit, on the day before she left for Thailand. She is scheduled to return to the province today, head a Cabinet meeting that would discuss, among other things, autonomous flooding.

The Inquirer's team to monitor media and news systems and tracked the progress of anti-insecurity and poverty alleviation programs with local officials before heading for the Angeles City town in the day.

Presidential Deputy Spokesperson Lourdes Aquino said the President wanted to make sure that poverty alleviation programs in the province were being managed properly because Pampanga was "special to her."

She also said Ms Arroyo wanted to know what she described as "hugay program" before her term ends in 2001.

Asked why the President did not have imperatives to local officials, Aquino said, "Everything is the work of the President."

Ms Arroyo also wanted a whaling certificate in Bataan Falls, the 300,000th "Bengal Tiger" release.

In Angeles City, she met with officials of the Department of Public Works and Highways and discussed ways to address the potential flooding in the province.

She asked the DPWH and local officials to review a proposal to dredge the Pampanga River due to being opposed by non-government organizations in the province and to find out if the project could actually increase flooding. Christine Capatash, Inquirer General Editor.

Comelec: Can't stop celebrity bet endorsers

By Cathy Yaman

EVERY DAY OFF FOR THE Commission on Elections (Comelec) must stop celebrities from endorsing any political candidate for the 2010 national elections.

"The case of endorsement by a celebrity is not yet as clear as the Comelec but it is very risky," said the poll body's spokesperson, James Alonzo in a text message.

The Comelec has an official provision banning a famous person from endorsing a presidential candidate, whether for pay or not.

Alonzo is the campaign principal aide of Sen. Benigno "Ninoy" Aquino III, the presidential candidate of the Liberal Party, while Ferdinand has such public agreements with Ferdinand's Party standard bearer Sen. Manny Villar.

"This is an interesting situation. But for very strong public appeal, I cannot say we can pay for it," Alonzo said.

There is no opinion, and it's not intended to force the Commission on Election, it is very difficult to prevent a private person from endorsing a candidate, but because she is famous and publicity does not mean she is not endorsed by the public," he said.

Alonzo said he expected the Commission would soon be faced with the issue.

In case this happens, he predicted, the Commission will support the personal freedom of these celebrities. There is a need to balance the law with the recognition of freedom of expression. As for private citizens, they can support and promote their own view, "you cannot consider it as a bet," Alonzo noted that US President Barack Obama, during his campaign, enjoyed the support of Oprah Winfrey, a well-known host with a wide following in the United States.

"We cannot expect everyone to be universally loved at the same level. Some candidates will have celebrity endorsers. I don't think the law can be broken. And it will be widely perceived if they are found doing otherwise, their personal freedom will then be open to the Commission's review," he said.

In the case here, Alonzo would not calculate for both national and local races that they are expected to initiate some measures campaigning since they are the official start of the campaign period. The official campaign period for national candidates begins on Feb. 8. Local candidates can start during local and putting up posters on March 26. Qualification is the priority for primary campaigning.

Alonzo defined primary campaigning as "any act the promoter (or's) candidate to disseminate the possibility of nomination of an opponent."

"If you promote yourself, that is campaigning. A candidate who goes around saying he is merely thanking the people (politicians) is campaigning. The context is important," he said.

Registration deadline final—poll body

THE COMMISSION ON ELECTIONS HAS ruled on the possibility of extending the registration period for some voters based on Oct. 31.

Comelec spokesperson James Alonzo at a text message said yesterday the poll body must finalize the list of voters for the May 10, 2010, elections by November. An extension of the registration period would mean delays that could jeopardize an already tight schedule.

"We need to close the list by the end of November for the allocation of precincts. Once the registration is finished, we cannot change the number of ballots and other supplies (like shipped to precincts) even need to close on election day," Alonzo said.

The list-down proposals covered the registration through the election being extended.

"Most people will be in the extension anyway," he said, referring to the extension of all voters' days on Nov. 1, a Sunday, and all kinds of the following day which was proclaimed a non-voting holiday. Alonzo, a lawyer, warned against claiming discrimination if would-be registrants decide they do not want to wait in the long queues. "Refused to wait in line is a personal choice. It cannot be called discrimination," he said.

As to it, the Commission has extended registration hours by five hours every day.

"We extended registration from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. to 8 a.m. to 10 p.m., essentially a week. We also added weekends, especially Saturdays but there are just too many people coming to the registration offices," Alonzo said.

In fact, the Commission has listed "between 2.8 million and 3 million new registrants," he said.

End corruption, DPWH chief dares subordinates

By Kristine L. Nolas

CAN RUST BAT IN OFFICE, DENY A? asked Public Works Secretary Victor Francisco when the department was hit with corruption and he challenged all its employees to get rid of it.

In a speech during the landmark reform presidency, Francisco, who replaced Department of Public Works and Highways Secretary (DPWH) Benjamin Ebdane Jr., said he was aware that many people had negative perceptions about the department.

Ebdane stepped down to become his bid for the presidency in the 2001 national elections.

Francisco, who served as a presidential adviser prior to his appointment to the DPWH, cited an infamous editorial last week that urged him to clean up the department.

"I am not a politician, but I am a public servant," he said, adding that he was not a politician but a public servant.

"My challenge to all DPWH officers and employees is that there is much to be achieved, that is, to end poor work, as long as I remain in the DPWH," he said.

Although there are bad apples in the agency, the "majority of DPWH's staff and the staff of its offices, field offices and knowledge," he said. He commended DPWH field men who worked 24 hours a day at the height of Tropical Storm "Ondoy" and "Teping."

"So I hope the DPWH can graduate from the corrupt category that it has been perceived to be in. I know that with the recent salary increases, and if only we would focus on the construction, we will be able to graduate from that category with a flying color," he said.

He said he would thank the regular and extraordinary efforts of all public infrastructure workers who have been the backbone of the nation's infrastructure.

Polis see little chance of Ebdane winning

By Robert Gonzales

Reported Correspondent

DIWATA CITY—RESIGNED PUBLIC Works Secretary Francisco Ebdane Jr. has no chance of winning the election and is expected to lose the vote in the 2004 presidential election.

But the president's son, who is the son of Ebdane, a member of the Philippine Nationalist Party, is expected to win the highest election post in the country even very early.

"Ebdane has a very small chance of winning the presidency in 2010. As a veteran politician, he is not a member of any of the major parties. Even if he runs for president, he would need at least two years in prison to get the support of the people," said Gen. Arsen Delos Angeles.

But Ebdane was quick to say he was proud of what Ebdane had done for the country.

"He is a kind, responsible and capable man," he said.

Delos Angeles, who said he could not support Ebdane, said he had committed his support to the Liberal Party candidate, Sen.

Francisco Ebdane Jr.

"I will support Ebdane, but I will not campaign against Ebdane here," he said.

Delos Angeles said while many Ebdanes are expected to win the election, he is not a political leader here.

"He is not through the ranks in the Philippine Nationalist Party where he served as its chief before his appointment to the cabinet, so he has never been tested in election politics," the governor said.

Francisco Ebdane, Ebdane's son, said Ebdane's appointment to the cabinet was a surprise and he is not a politician.

"I am not a politician, but I am a public servant," he said, adding that he was not a politician but a public servant.

"He is a kind, responsible and capable man," he said.

"I will support Ebdane, but I will not campaign against Ebdane here," he said.

Delos Angeles said while many Ebdanes are expected to win the election, he is not a political leader here.

"He is not through the ranks in the Philippine Nationalist Party where he served as its chief before his appointment to the cabinet, so he has never been tested in election politics," the governor said.

Francisco Ebdane, Ebdane's son, said Ebdane's appointment to the cabinet was a surprise and he is not a politician.

"I am not a politician, but I am a public servant," he said, adding that he was not a politician but a public servant.

"He is a kind, responsible and capable man," he said.

Total gun ban

THE COMMISSION ON ELECTIONS LAST WEEK said it would enforce a total gun ban next year in an effort to minimize poll-related violence in the run-up to the May 2010 elections. This is certainly welcome news, and we hope that no exceptions from the gun ban will be heeded. With a total gun ban, only police, military units and security guards on duty and in proper uniform would be allowed to carry firearms.

EDITORIAL

The planned total gun ban is not new. It was first endorsed during the first election after the 1986 Revolution in 1987. The Commission on Elections (COMELEC) prohibited the carrying of deadly weapons in the polling places and within a 300-meter radius of the precincts during the registration of voters, the voting and the counting of votes. It also prohibited the carrying of firearms outside the residences or places of business of licensed owners during the election period.

Similar rules were issued by the Comelec in a resolution in 2001, and again in 2006. But despite the law and implementing resolutions, election violence continued in all the elections held after the 1986 Revolution. According to the Philippine National Police Information Office, a total of 646 people were killed in the eight elections held after 1986, or an average of about six deaths in every election. That is a headline not many, or no one should be, in any election.

It is heartening to note that the 1987 itself recognized the need to restrict gun use. Last Tuesday, it proposed a total gun ban but it proved to be overruled by the National Law Enforcement Coordinating Committee, the country's highest coordinating body for law enforcement agencies.

We hope the PNP and other law enforcement agencies of the government will not just pay lip service to the ban of firearms during the election period and strictly enforce the total gun ban. Once the authorities relax the ban, hundreds of applicants will be filed, and many of them will most probably be granted, making the law practically inoperative.

Hard to hard with the enforcement of the total gun ban, the PNP with the help of the other law enforcement agencies, will have to conduct an intensive nationwide campaign against loose firearms which were estimated to total 1.1 million at the time this year. That's too many guns which, in the hands of many violent and irresponsible people, could be used to create chaos and violence during the election season.

The Philippines is perhaps the only country in the world in terms of freedom from election violence. It is a country that we should be ashamed of, and whose reputation in the coming elections we should try to prevent. In any decent, civilized democratic society, no one should be in an election, unless the death is due to a natural cause or an accident.

After the elections in May 2007, the Asian Human Rights Commission said the deaths, violence and corrupt practices that occurred during the Philippine polls were "extremely appalling." The commission said: "This violent election in democracy has cast serious questions upon the capability of the government, in particular the Philippine National Police, to ensure their duties and responsibilities to protect their citizens and the public, reduce the law and uphold order."

The commission also said that "it is not only the culture of violence that is at fault but the tolerance of such extreme violence that goes unchallenged that contributes as well."

The law (COMELEC Election Code) is there. The Comelec, with the endorsement of the PNP itself, will now require a total gun ban. It only remains for the government, and particularly the PNP, to enforce the law and implement measures to exercise political will and to strictly enforce the law.

Freedom to Tibetans

PRESIDENT GRAMA HAS TWO QUESTS TO PLEASE CHINESE leaders who are usually open to meeting with the Dalai Lama. Chinese commissioners for foreign relations would like to see a free Tibet, but they also want to see a free Tibet. They also want to see a free Tibet. They also want to see a free Tibet.

FOREIGN COMMENT
The informal talks between Grama, President Hu Jintao and Chinese Vice President Hu Jintao in the White House with the Dalai Lama had no more effects on US-China relations. Grama should be using his presidential power to continue Chinese leaders that their interest would be lost even if they granted rights of autonomy and religious freedom to Tibetans. The Dalai Lama's

NBA luring fans back with lower ticket prices

LOS ANGELES—JUST FOUR DAYS AFTER the NBA and its referees ended a lockout of more than a month by agreeing on a fresh contract, the 2005-06 season will begin on Tuesday with daunting challenges to be faced on all fronts.

While the NBA situation seems to be quickly improving, bringing the fans in remains a daunting task. The league is looking to sell out games after last season's opening, bringing the fans in remains a daunting task. Seems just last week the season ticket market was down, down 75 percent in some areas. The league is looking to sell out games after last season's opening, bringing the fans in remains a daunting task.

Compelling competition on the North American landscape is the only guarantee to keep fans happy and television viewers glued to their sets, and the only indication suggest a thriving season is on the cards.

Lakers vs Clippers

The Los Angeles Lakers finally their championship defense on Tuesday against their crosstown rivals the Los Angeles Clippers. The Lakers are looking to win their first championship since 1987.

While the Lakers have brought in 15-year veteran Shaquille O'Neal to lead their defense, the Cleveland Cavaliers have added Shaquille O'Neal, the former Celtics star, to their roster.

METRO MANILA STUDY

Smoking blamed for 1 in 5 heart attacks

By Dana E. Paulding

OUT OF EVERY FIVE CASES OF a heart attack in Metro Manila, one can be attributed to exposure to secondhand smoke, the Department of Health (DOH) said yesterday, citing the results of a survey conducted by anti-smoking advocates.

Metrolung Knowledge (MEL) and the Philippine International Chronic Tobacco Users and Lung Diseases (PITCUL) estimated that between 30 and 35 percent of heart attacks in Metro Manila could be linked to secondhand smoke depending on the number of hours of exposure per week.

The group found that smoking is a major risk factor for heart disease, and that exposure to secondhand smoke is also a major risk factor for heart disease.

Secondhand smoke, also known as passive smoking, is defined as the smoke from the burning of a cigarette and the smoke inhaled by a non-smoker from a smoker.

According to the WHO, secondhand smoke causes heart disease.

Children who are exposed to secondhand smoke are at increased risk for sudden infant death syndrome, acute respiratory infections, ear infections and asthma.

Studies also showed that exposure to secondhand smoke for more than 21 hours per week can increase men's risk of a heart attack by as much as 42 percent.

The WHO/ICM study showed that 15 percent of people in Metro Manila were exposed to secondhand smoke every day in workplaces, restaurants and other public places.

While most smokers reported that they quit after being exposed to secondhand smoke, only eight percent said they quit the smoke by their cigarette.

The DOH and its partner agencies are working to reduce the health risks of secondhand smoke.

Fernando: Marikina back on track

By Melissa N. Lopez

MARIKINA IS NOW BACK ON its feet more than a month after Tropical Storm "Ondoy" caused massive flooding and destruction in the city. The city government, led by Mayor Fernando, has declared the city back on track.

At the same time, MMDA Chair Reynold Fernandez said his team is working together to ensure the city's 75 percent of which was submerged in flood waters at the height of the storm.

"We are officially ending the state of emergency and declaring the city back on track," said Mayor Fernando. "We are now 30 days of work in Marikina, we have resumed a lot of normal city activities and we are back on track. Gov't and MILF doing a charade on Sinnott's kidnapping

THE PHILIPPINE IS BRINGING GIVEN a more serious or limited than the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) in the efforts to rescue the kidnapped Sinnott.

The MILF government is going along with the law. Most people, at least those who are kidnapped, are not the children of the MILF.

No legal authority rule place in MILF-held territories under the concept of, or even from, MILF higher-ups.

The MILF's intention that its helping in locating Sinnott to the kidnappers is a pure hypothesis.

The a matter of policy, the MILF is obliged to report to the host efforts to help seek out the child and immediate recovery of the child.

On course, the MILF will be able to locate the child but because he's been with them from the very start.

Disgraced S. Korea cloning scientist convicted

SEOUL—A SOUTH KOREAN court on Monday found a disgraced stem cell scientist guilty of fraud and handed down a suspended sentence in a case that sent shock waves through the global stem cell community.

Hwang, once a celebrated medical researcher for bringing human eggs to the forefront of stem cell studies, had faced an on-again, off-again scandal, including state funds and violating bioethics laws.

"The main guilty of fabrication," the Seoul court said in a verdict in the trial that started more than three years ago and included punishing details about his scientific work and how he treated his team.

The court also said that Hwang had diverted a portion of the money he received for research for his personal use.

"But he has done his best to pay back his debt," the court said in its verdict. Hwang's supporters, who have pushed the court for each hearing, broke into applause when the court sentenced Hwang to two years in jail, suspended for three years.

Prosecutors were seeking a four-year prison term, saying Hwang had not backtracked research and despite earlier pled the cloning, which was at one point being processed into a global center for stem cell research.

Hwang and his lawyers did not speak to reporters. Hwang's team was thought to have much more realistic leverage by doing stem cell and making them in a specific period, which allowed Hwang of providing research to the donor. The report changed again as stem diseases such as Alzheimer's.

Stem cells are the body's master cells, giving rise to all the tissues, organs and blood. Embryonic stem cells are considered the most powerful kinds of stem cells, as they have the potential to give rise to any type of tissue.

His investigation took at Seoul National University and in late 2005 that Hwang's team believed stem cells in new papers on human embryonic stem cells. Hwang insisted his papers and the government revealed his stem cell research results.

Risk factor: Hwang's team had not reported, leaving some doubt about his research results.

Research Foundation in 2005, which specialized in stem cell research and had produced

Hwang is still regarded with some by many in the country but has followed a road, down of public relations. "Perhaps there is a chance that he might regain trust from people through stem cell research. However, the staff has never got his handling. But currently, it is difficult, which caused large loss of investment."

The European Union's scientific community expressed its support for Hwang, who said the article had "no political content."

Twitter serves up ideas from its followers

SAN FRANCISCO—TWITTER started two years ago as a free e-mail service, offering free e-mail to its users. It was then that the site began to change its focus, moving away from e-mail to social networking. This is reflected in its new presentation, in its new features, and in its new focus on social networking.

In the past several weeks, Twitter users have seen a new focus on social networking, and a new focus on social networking.

Technology companies have been the most active in trying to get in on the Twitter train. This is in large part because the Twitter network is growing so fast.

Twitter, though, may not be as successful as some of the other social networking sites. Twitter is still a relatively new site, and it is still in the early stages of its development. Twitter is still a relatively new site, and it is still in the early stages of its development.

A Twitter user, however, has added a new twist to the site. Twitter users can now post their own tweets, which are short messages that can be shared with other users.

Iraq bombings spark international fury

BEIRUT—IRAQI SECURITY forces were on high alert on Monday as they tried to catch up with a series of bombings in Baghdad that killed 133 people and injured 150.

The bombings, which were carried out by a group of extremists, were the deadliest in Iraq since the 2003 invasion.

US soldiers were called in to assist with the investigation, as they tried to identify the group responsible for the bombings.

Economy said to have grown faster in third quarter

By Michael V. Sison

THE BASICED SYSTEM, SO PHILIPPINES (BSP) said the economy likely grew seven times faster in the third quarter, citing macroeconomic indicators that exceeded those seen in the first two quarters of the year.

In the first quarter, the economy posted a growth of 5.6 percent, the lowest in almost three decades. The annual growth performance prompted banks that the Philippine economy would slide in a recession alongside its neighbors.

Recession is defined as two consecutive quarters of decline in output of an economy, usually measured in terms of gross domestic product. GDP is the sum of values of goods and services produced and rendered within an economy in a given period.

In the second quarter, however, the economy grew by 3.3 percent. The economy's performance amazed officials that the Philippines would not fall into a recession.

BSP Governor Benjamin Sison said reports that the economy performed exceptionally in the third quarter.

The public may thus expect a GDP growth of more than 1.5 percent, putting to rest speculation that the domestic economy would resemble this year, he said.

Drivers of growth in the third quarter include the continuing rise of remittances from overseas Filipino workers and an increase of foreign direct investments and foreign portfolio investments, Sison said.

Data from the BSP showed that foreign direct investments posted a net inflow of $1.2 billion in January to July, up 70.4 percent from that of the same period last year.

Foreign portfolio investments registered a net inflow of $228 million in the first nine months of the year, a turnaround from a net outflow of $389 million last year.

New IP rules to shield investors

By Abigail L. Ho

DOCTORS WHO ARE THINKING twice about investing in the country for fear of having their intellectual property (IP) infringed may soon breathe a sigh of relief now that the Intellectual Property Office of the Philippines has come out with a special set of rules governing IP rights violations.

In yesterday's Colloquium for Commercial Courts Judges on Intellectual Property Rights, IP Philippines Director

General Adrian Cristobal Jr. presented to Chief Justice Reynato Puno the proposed Special Rules on IP litigation.

The rules would expedite the resolution of IP cases, which usually took at least six years to resolve, Cristobal said.

Under the proposed special rules, selected commercial courts in the National Capital Region would be designated Special IP courts with national jurisdiction.

He said he would "have these rules promulgated to the Supreme Court this week, on possible time, after proper review."
